Memorial Cup arrives in style

The puck stops here. Blades, city officials excited over to welcome hockey fans from all over Canada

MORGAN MODJESKI

Eighteen months in the making, the MasterCard Memorial Cup Tournament has kicked off in Saskatoon.

Celebrated with an arrival ceremony of the trophy itself at the city's Vimy Memorial, the tournament will bring some of Canada's best young hockey players to Saskatoon.

Jack Brodsky, owner of the Saskatoon Blades, said he feels the organization has done an exceptional job preparing for the event and he's excited about the chance to showcase the Bridge City, along with the Blades, to the rest of Canada.

"Any time you host something like this, it's all part of being on the national scene," said Brodsky. "We know that's going to happen and we've been planning for that.... It's just nice to get the name out there — we're proud of our organization and proud of the people who are in it."

Also at the arrival ceremony was MLA for Saskatoon–Silver Springs Ken Cheveldayoff on behalf of Premier Brad Wall. He said while he'll be rooting for the Blades to come out the victor, he's excited about the chance to welcome hockey fans from all over Canada.

"Saskatchewan residents are so proud when we can welcome residents from across the country and in this case across North America," he said. "Saskatoon always does a great job because of the volunteers and all of the people who put their heart and soul into it."

While Memorial Cup action has already started off the ice, the puck drops for the first round of the tournament on Friday at 6 p.m. when the Saskatoon Blades face off against the London Knights.

Family of murder victim will 'never heal' or 'be at peace'

First murder of 2013. As 19-year-old man charged in stabbing makes first court appearance, the victim's aunt speaks out

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

A 19-year-old man charged with the city's first homicide of 2013 appeared in provincial court on Thursday morning.

Raven Don Constant, was charged with the second-degree murder of Jonathen Livingston Moosewaypayo, 28, who was stabbed multiple times a half-hour into New Year's Day outside a residence in the 100 Block of Avenue O South.

His aunt, Lucy Moosewaypayo, was at court on Thursday and said that although the arrest and charges have provided some closure for the family, they would never fully heal.

"It gives us a little peace of mind, I guess, but we'll never be at peace," she said.

"It's really hard to lose a young guy like that from our family ... he was a really hard-working man and they didn't have to take him — they didn't have to do that."

She continued, "We'll never heal, he's gone ... we'll never see Jonathen again."

Constant was arrested on Wednesday afternoon at the Saskatoon Provincial Correctional Centre.

At the time of his arrest, he was remanded on charges stemming from another Jan. 1 incident, which resulted in two men, a 17-year-old and a 19-year-old, being stabbed in the area of Avenue P. South and 22nd Street West.

Along with being charged with second-degree murder, Constant is also facing charges of attempted murder and aggravated assault.

He is scheduled to be back in court on June 5.

Dog-shooting case in hands of Crown

Eight-month-old dog Bentley
CONTRIBUTED

The Saskatchewan RCMP has completed an investigation into the shooting death of a dog in the RM of Grant, just east of Saskatoon.

The Price family say their next-door neighbour, the Krawchucks, shot their eight-month-old St. Bernard, Bentley, on April 11 when the dog ran into Krawchuck's property.

"We just can't believe what has happened ... it's very distressing. He was a good dog," said Fiona Price, 39.

Price, who moved with her family to Saskatchewan from England nine years ago, said her 16-year-old daughter was also on their neighbour's property at the time of the shooting, attempting to retrieve the dog.

"It's something no mother wants their daughter to go through," Price said.

RCMP say the investigation included talking to witnesses, and have forwarded information on to the Crown Prosecutor's Office, which will determine if charges will be laid or not.

The Krawchucks, as well as their lawyer, refused to comment on the case while it is before the Crown.

Get gears set for long weekend with Bikes on Broadway race

Time to compete. Bikes on Broadway will prove to be another exciting weekend of amazing athleticism and sportsmanship

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

For the past 22 years, the May long weekend in Saskatoon has seen some of the prairie's most elite cyclists compete in Saskatchewan's longest bicycle race known as Bikes on Broadway.

And with some interesting additions to race plans, this year — its 23rd year — Bikes on Broadway will prove to be another exciting weekend of amazing athleticism and sportsmanship.

"This year we've actually added in a new category too, which is para-cycling," said Janice Matus, race organizer.

"We will have a couple of guys out there on hand cycles ... it will be interesting because we haven't had that before."

Being touted as Saskatchewan's premier road race, Matus said that a number of participating cyclists will be trying out for the Canada Games, taking place in August.

"We also have a high performance team here in Saskatchewan ... Bikes on Broadway is one of their qualifier races so they're coming out to get their best times to see if they can make the Saskatchewan team go to the Canada Games," said Matus.

Matus said all the events taking place over the long weekend are fun to watch and encourages people to come out to cheer on their local cyclists, racing at top speeds through some of Saskatoon's finest scenery.

Schedule

- Saturday May 18 – Time trials. Starts at Sheraton Hotel on Spadina with things kicking off around 6 p.m.
- Sunday May 19 – Road race. Head over to the Dakota Dunes around noon to check out the longer road race.
- Monday May 20 – Criterium. With cyclists hitting the course at 8:45 a.m. on Broadway. Make sure you stay for the kids criterium happening immediately after all other races at 12:45 p.m.

Sheepdogs to offer free Victoria Day concert

Saskatoon's homegrown rockers the Sheepdogs will be playing a free concert this Monday on Broadway Avenue. Ewan Currie, frontman for the band, said the boys are excited about performing on the strip where they got their start. MATT BARNES/CONTRIBUTED

Getting a chance to return to their old stomping grounds, Saskatoon's homegrown rockers the Sheepdogs will be making their way back to Broadway Avenue on Victoria Day for a free concert as part of the Red Bull Tour-Bus Hometown Tour.

Frontman Ewan Currie said the band is excited to get back to Broadway, where they got their start.

"It feels great," said Currie. "It's right there on Broadway, which is where our band grew up — playing the bars on that strip, and we rehearsed about a block away, so it's the perfect place for us to do a homecoming show."

He continued, "We have a connection to Broadway. It's the sort of artsy, music district in Saskatoon and if you want to see live music in Saskatoon you go down to Broadway — it's the spot where music happens."

Andre De Pape, culture marketing manager with Red Bull Canada, said they're excited to bring the Sheepdogs back home to Saskatoon, noting they've maxed out RSVPs for the show and are expecting more than 3,000 people.

The Sheepdogs are scheduled to take the stage at 5 p.m. and will be playing at the intersection of Broadway Avenue and 10 Street East. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Deadly accident

13-year-old killed in ATV rollover

A 13-year-old boy is dead after an all-terrain vehicle accident in northeastern Saskatchewan.

The teen was driving the ATV Wednesday evening in a field east of Arborfield between his residence and his grandparents' home.

RCMP say the boy tried to travel between two fence posts where the barbed wire was supposed to be down.

They say the wire caught the machine and caused it to roll.

The boy died while being taken to hospital by ambulance.

His name has not been released.

Sask. legislature ends spring sitting passing new laws

The spring sitting of the Saskatchewan legislature has wrapped up after debate on labour legislation, private liquor stores, the sale of a Crown corporation and seniors care.

Fifty-three pieces of legislation were passed, including one private member's bill to make reporting of asbestos in public buildings mandatory.

Premier Brad Wall says he thinks the highlight of the spring sitting was presenting a balanced budget.

Wall says it was also important to pass new labour legislation that he believes will modernize employment rules. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Supreme Court to rule on Walmart baby case

The Supreme Court of Canada is set to decide the fate of a Saskatchewan woman who gave birth in a Walmart bathroom stall and left the newborn in a toilet.

April Halkett was found not guilty in June 2009 of abandoning the baby in the store in Prince Albert.

But the Crown disagreed with the verdict and took the case to the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal, which upheld the findings of a trial judge. The judge said he believed Halkett's testimony that she didn't know she was pregnant.

Cave paintings point to early intelligence

Big brains. Much-mocked relations may have been more advanced, while human IQ keeps dropping

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

Sophisticated paintings indicate that Neanderthals could have matched human intelligence, analysts claim.

The discovery of "exquisite horses and outlines of bison" in a Spanish cave suggests that mankind's poorly regarded relations were capable of abstract thought, according to research in the science journal Nature.

The artworks were thought to be a product of early humans, but new dating technologies indicate they are more than 40,000 years old and may have originated from before humans lived in Europe.

This follows the recent discovery of sophisticated tools and ornaments that contradicted the primitive depiction of Neanderthals. "They could innovate on their own," said study author Julien Riel-Salvatore of the University of Colorado Denver. "My research suggests that they were a different kind of human, but humans nonetheless."

The Neanderthal brain was larger than man's, although it was believed that large parts were devoted to vision and simple function, producing different thought processes. But recent discoveries have led to a new debate on the species' capacity and even efforts to clone one for public-interest purposes. This has had the support from Harvard genetics professor George Church, who claimed that "Neanderthals think differently than we do. They could even be more intelligent than us."

Another assumption about human intelligence was challenged this week by research claiming that IQs are dropping.

The well-known Flynn effect holds that IQ grows three points per decade, but researchers from Umea University in Sweden found that subjects were on average 14 points lower than counterparts from the 19th century.

Coin toss used to break mayoral election tie

What do you do when two candidates running for mayor in the Philippines get exactly the same number of votes? You get them to toss a coin.

Marvic Feraren and Boyet Py both received 3,236 votes for mayor of San Teodoro town in Mindoro Oriental province in Monday's elections.

The Elections Commissions suggested the two flip a coin five times each, which is allowed under the country's Election Code to break a tie.

Feraren won Tuesday, but not before a second round of coin flipping.

The Great One. Largest Gretzky memorabilia collection hits auction block

It started almost two decades ago with a $20 hockey stick once wielded by a forgotten player for a string of mediocre teams.

It ends this week when millions of dollars are likely to change hands as what may be the world's largest game-worn collection of memorabilia from the world's best player from the sport's last great dynasty goes on the auction block.

Shawn Chaulk, a quick-to-smile former Newfoundlander whose hoard of everything Wayne Gretzky makes grown men weak in the knees, says it's all been nothing more than an attempt to get closer to the game he loves.

"When you're a fan, fans are usually at a distance," he recently told The Canadian Press in the basement office of his home in Fort McMurray, Alta. The space is a forest of game-used Gretzky hockey sticks, a dressing room of game-worn Gretzky jerseys and a trainer's bag — full of assorted pucks, gloves, helmets and skates — all touched, used and sweated in by the Great One himself. Tornadoes leave a trail of destruction

North Texas. At least 6 dead, dozens homeless as violent spring storms tear through neighbourhoods

A rash of tornadoes slammed into several small communities in North Texas overnight, leaving at least six people dead, dozens more injured and hundreds homeless. The violent spring storm scattered bodies, flattened homes and threw trailers onto cars.

In Granbury, the worst-hit city, a tornado tore through two neighbourhoods around 8 p.m. Wednesday. Resident Elizabeth Tovar described the fist-sized hail that heralded the tornado's arrival, prompting her and her family to hide in their bathroom.

"I heard glass shattering and I knew my house was going," Tovar said, shaking her head. "We looked up and … the whole ceiling was gone."

The powerful storm crushed buildings as it tore through the area, leaving some as just piles of planks and rubble. Trees and debris were scattered across yards, fences flattened.

Another tornado that storm spotters said was a mile wide tore through Cleburne, a courthouse city of about 30,000 about 25 miles southeast of Granbury.

In one neighbourhood, a trucking company trailer that had been parked on the street was picked up and dropped onto a nearby car and garage. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cyclone loses power as it hits Bangladesh

Cyclone Mahasan weakened Thursday into a tropical storm and then dissipated, causing far less damage than had been feared as it passed over Bangladesh and spared Myanmar almost entirely, meteorological officials said.

At least 45 deaths related to Mahasen were reported in Bangladesh, Myanmar and Sri Lanka, but officials had prepared for a far greater storm. Bangladesh evacuated one million people from coastal areas and the United Nations warned that 8.2 million people could face life-threatening conditions.

A 1991 cyclone that slammed into Bangladesh from the Bay of Bengal killed an estimated 139,000 people and left millions homeless. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mayor appears to smoke crack in video: Torstar

'False and defamatory'. Lawyer retained by Toronto's Rob Ford asks how reporters can verify what someone is doing or smoking in a video

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford talks to reporters in his office Thursday. Two Torstar News Service reporters have seen a video appearing to show Ford smoking crack. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

A cellphone video that appears to show Toronto Mayor Rob Ford smoking crack cocaine is being shopped around that city by a group of men involved in the drug trade.

Two Torstar News Service reporters have viewed the video, which appears to show Ford sitting in a chair, inhaling from what appears to be a glass crack pipe. Ford is incoherent, trading jibes with an off-camera speaker who goads the clearly impaired mayor by raising topics including Justin Trudeau and the high-school football team Ford coaches.

At one point he is heard calling Trudeau a "fag." Later in the 90-second video he is asked about the football team and he appears to say, "They are just f—g minorities."

Torstar had no way to verify the video, which appears to clearly show Ford in a well-lit room. Attempts to reach Ford and members of his staff were unsuccessful.

A lawyer retained by Ford, Dennis Morris, said that Thursday's publication by the Gawker website of some details related to the video was "false and defamatory." Morris told Torstar that by viewing a video it is impossible to tell what a person is doing. "How can you indicate what the person is actually doing or smoking?" Morris said.

Ford's chief of staff, Mark Twohey, would not listen to questions by Torstar News Service on Thursday night and abruptly hung up when they called.

The video was taken on a phone by a person who said he has supplied crack cocaine to the Mayor. TORSTAR NEWS SERIVCE

Mother's Day shooting. Accused brought to court, faces $10-million bond

As the tally of those wounded in a Mother's Day parade shooting in New Orleans ticked up to 20, the suspect made his first court appearance on Thursday, remaining silent as a judge set his bond at $10 million US.

Prosecutors said a witness picked out a photo of Akein Scott, 19, from a lineup. An arrest affidavit said the unidentified witness told investigators that Scott was the person seen in a surveillance video that police released to the public as they searched for him for three days. The witness also said Scott was carrying a silver-and-black semi-automatic handgun at the shooting scene, according to the affidavit.

Scott, shackled and wearing an orange prison jumpsuit, stood by as his court-appointed attorney handled the proceedings.

Magistrate Judge Gerard Hansen set Scott's bond at $10 million — $500,000 on each of the 20 counts in the shooting. Authorities earlier said 19 were wounded, but prosecutors told Hansen the number had increased. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bosma case. Police find incinerator on murder suspect's farm property

Police in Hamilton, Ont., have seized an incinerator found on the property of a man accused of killing a 32-year-old father after a test drive.

Police believe Tim Bosma was killed on May 6, the same night he took two men for a test drive in a truck he had posted for sale online. His body was found this week, burned beyond recognition.

Dellen Millard, 27, of Toronto, has been charged with first-degree murder, forcible confinement and theft of a vehicle.

Investigators are searching two of his properties in the Waterloo region of southwestern Ontario — an airport hangar and a farm — and say they have removed the incinerator from the farm property.

Det.-Sgt. Matt Kavanagh wouldn't say if the incinerator had been used or not. He expects police will continue searching three vehicles, the hangar and the farm for at least another day. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mother chases after suspect

A mother whose four-year-old was being abducted chased the suspect and crashed her vehicle into his car, triggering a manhunt, police said Thursday.

The young girl was playing in her yard at an apartment complex in Albuquerque, N.M., when some teenagers saw the kidnapping and ran to alert the girl's mother.

The family called police and the mother jumped into her vehicle and gave chase for about 11 kilometres, unaware the man had pushed the girl out of the Silver Buick before fleeing. The girl was found nearby, uninjured, police said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Aptly, path to legalization of pot will be slow going

A long, wild trip.
Taxes are expected to bring in millions of dollars in state revenue

It's one thing to legalize marijuana. It's another to figure out how to sell it, grow it, regulate it, test it and tax it.

Voters in Washington state and Colorado made pot use for adults over 21 legal last fall, but that was just the first step. On Thursday, Washington officials are expected to release the first draft of rules governing the state's new marijuana industry.

Washington's Liquor Control Board has been devising rules for the industry, covering topics such as how the plants will be grown, how marijuana products will be tested for strength and quality, and how many retail stores will be allowed.

The rules are expected to become effective in August, and the board will begin accepting applications for growing, processing and retailing licenses in September. The state expects to issue pot licenses in December.

So when would people be able to legally purchase marijuana in Washington? Probably not until spring of 2014.

While marijuana users look forward to legalized sales, state officials are anticipating that pot taxes would bring Washington hundreds of millions of dollars a year in new revenue.

All of this planning in Washington state — and Colorado — is set against uncertainty about what the ultimate response from the U.S. Justice Department might be. Marijuana remains illegal under federal law.

Convicted.
Man was ID'd by victim via blinking

An Ohio man was found guilty Thursday in the shooting death of a man who authorities say identified his assailant by blinking his eyes while paralyzed and hooked up to a ventilator.

Ricardo Woods, 35, was convicted of fatally shooting David Chandler in Cincinnati in 2010 by a jury that began deliberations Tuesday. Woods also was convicted of felonious assault. He could be sentenced to life in prison.

Police interviewed the 35-year-old Chandler while he was hooked up to a ventilator, paralyzed after being shot in the head and neck in 2010 as he sat in a car. He was only able to communicate with his eyes and died about two weeks later.

Prosecutors showed jurors a taped police interview in which they say Chandler blinked three times for "yes" to identify a photo of Woods as his shooter.

Attack ads have kids telling Tories to grow up

Playing politics. Grade 5 students write letters to PM, compare commercials targeting Trudeau to 'cyberbullying'

Some Grade 5 students have some advice for Prime Minister Stephen Harper: Stop being mean to Justin Trudeau.

Seven students from an Ottawa-area Catholic school have written to Harper asking that he pull Conservative attack ads, which began running within hours of Trudeau claiming the Liberal leadership last month.

Teacher Natalie Casault said the idea came from the students themselves during a lesson on government last month. To the kids, she said the ads looked just like cyberbullying, which they'd learned about a couple of weeks earlier.

The ads feature video of Trudeau doing a mock striptease for a charity event, his head surrounded by fairy dust as a narrator sneeringly recounts his past experience as a camp counsellor and drama teacher.

Casault, who teaches at Ecoles des voyageurs in Orleans, Ont., said she didn't raise the issue, a student did.

"He said, 'Yeah, they're really not nice. He did a charity and they're laughing at him and he looks like a clown and they're saying he's just a simple teacher, and that's not fair. They can't do that, Madame, that's cyberbullying.'"

Other students agreed, so Casault suggested they write letters to Harper. One little girl did and read it to the class, which eventually prompted others to write their own.

"They said, 'You know, if it was me right there, I'd be crying.' And they're cute because they would say, 'You know, I think Justin is really sad about this,'" Casault said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The letter-writing campaign comes as a new poll suggests the ads targeting Trudeau may have backfired.

Not quite Top Gun. U.S. company puts brakes on flying car after B.C. crash

The Transportation Safety Board says a U.S. manufacturer of flying cars has grounded all five of its prototypes until it can determine a cause for a recent crash in B.C.

One of the Maverick flying cars crashed near a Vernon, B.C., elementary school last week, leaving a pilot and a passenger with minor injuries.

The TSB's Bill Yearwood says representatives of the manufacturer are attempting to determine what caused the temporary loss of control. Until that has been determined, Yearwood says the maker has decided to ground the prototypes.

The TSB has no jurisdiction in the investigation because the Maverick isn't a registered aircraft, and Yearwood says it will be up to the builders to report back on the cause of the crash during a test flight.

Lottery scam

Jamaican charged with swindling Alberta man out of $30K

A Jamaican woman has been charged with fraud after allegedly swindling an elderly Canadian man in a lottery scam.

For years, numerous Jamaican fraudsters have conned mostly elderly Americans out of their retirement savings by promising that they've won millions in an international lottery but they need to wire a payment to cover taxes.

In a Thursday statement, financial investigators say the new arrest is the first one to go before Jamaica's courts involving a Canadian victim. Police say there could be a "worrying shift" of global locales targeted by Jamaican scammers.

The 75-year-old victim from Alberta says he was persuaded to send $30,000 to Jamaica.

Suspect Santressa Kerr was arrested on Wednesday in Jamaica.

YouTube star arrested for alleged murder

Kai the Hitchhiker. Suspect became popular on the web after breaking up a fight with his hatchet

A homeless, hatchet-wielding hitchhiker who became an Internet hero earlier this year was arrested Thursday for allegedly beating a New Jersey lawyer to death inside his home.

Caleb "Kai" McGillvary, whose star turn as "Kai the Hatchet Wielding Hitchhiker" came after he intervened in an attack on a California utility worker, was arrested at a Philadelphia bus station, Union County prosecutor Theodore Romankow said.

"I believe that everyone is a little safer with this person off the streets," the prosecutor said. Philadelphia police could not immediately be reached for comment.

McGillvary was charged with killing Joseph Galfy, Jr., a Clark, N.J., attorney found dead Monday. Romankow said he will be processed and sent to back to New Jersey, where his bail is set at $3 million. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tainted blood. Victims call for government to refuse approval of private plasma clinics

Victims of the tainted-blood scandal and their families are urging the federal government to stop proposed blood-plasma clinics from operating in the country.

Canada could face another blood tragedy unless the government refuses to approve three prospective paid-donor clinics in the Toronto area, said Antonia Swann, whose husband died after he contracted HIV and hepatitis C from tainted blood.

Private blood-donor clinics were part of the problem that led to the scandal, she said Thursday.

Vigilance

"We have a good system ... but I don't want to see other Canadians hurt by another tainted-blood tragedy."

Antonia Swann, who lost her husband to HIV and hepatitis C contracted from tainted blood

"I will not stand by and bury more friends and more family like my late husband James while we just sit back and allow another private blood-donor clinic to open," she said.

Her husband "went through hell" and there's no way of knowing what other kind of blood-bourne pathogen or disease is lurking out there, she said.

"Yes, we have a good system, but we don't want to increase the risk, and I don't want to see other Canadians hurt by another tainted-blood tragedy."

Thousands of people in Canada were infected with HIV and hepatitis C after receiving tainted-blood transfusions in the 1980s.

Michael McCarthy, who received tainted blood, said Canadians must be vigilant to keep their blood supply safe.

Health Canada is currently looking at the clinics, but McCarthy said they need to open up their consultations to the public. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Convicted monkey killer sentenced

A man convicted of breaking into a Boise zoo last fall and brutally beating to death one of two Patas monkeys has been ordered to spend up to a year in a treatment program at a state prison.

Michael Watkins, 22, was sentenced Thursday for his role in the Nov. 17 crime that caused shock and outrage in Idaho's capitol city and beyond.

Watkins pleaded guilty in March to felony attempted grand theft for illegally entering the zoo, built in a city park a few blocks from the downtown, and animal cruelty, a misdemeanour under state law.

Judge Lynn G. Norton said she wanted a punishment that fits the crime but allows the young father of a seven-month-old son to turn his life around. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fatal accident. Alberta man drops request for parole, will wait for release

An Alberta man convicted of killing five people when his cement truck smashed into the back of their car says he'll wait until his statutory release next month rather than face another National Parole Board hearing.

A two-member board panel was unable to reach agreement after a hearing Thursday on Daniel Tschetter's application for full parole. The board said another hearing would have to be organized quickly with two new panel members. But Tschetter told reporters he would drop his request.

"I'm not going to go to another hearing,'' he said. "I'm going to go now until my (statutory release), because every time you go to a hearing you've got to realize you're opening up old wounds."

"The hearings don't get any easier. They get tougher.''

An aunt of one of the young victims, 16-month-old Zachary Morrison, pointed out that reliving the memories of what happened isn't easy for the families of everyone who died either.

"After all these years, it isn't getting any easier,'' said Tracey Grieder, who attended with her husband Herb. "We just wanted to come and make sure we can face him down and let him know that it still is painful for us.''

Tschetter said he had considered not having Thursday's hearing in the first place.

Tschetter, 55, had already been spotted driving dangerously before his truck slammed into a vehicle stopped at a red light in Calgary in December 2007. The impact was so violent that pieces of the car were scattered for hundreds of metres along Macleod Trail, a busy north-south thoroughfare.

Duffy resigns from Conservative caucus

Unanswered questions. Senator stepping aside amidst spending scandal

Conservative Sen. Mike Duffy SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Senator Mike Duffy resigned from the Conservative caucus to sit as an independent Thursday night amid a controversy over his housing claims, leaving a host of questions about the nature of his expenses and why the prime minister backed him for so long.

The employment status of Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, remains unchanged - despite his secret gift to Duffy to help repay the improper expenses.

Only a week ago, the Conservative government was hailing Duffy's leadership for repaying the funds the Senate said he owed. Senate Leader Majory LeBreton declared the matter closed.

But then it came to light that Wright had cut Duffy a personal cheque to cover the repayment in March. Harper's office characterized it as a personal gift, but this week Duffy called it a loan.

The Canadian Press reported Thursday that Duffy campaigned for the Conservatives during the April 2011 election while claiming to be on Senate business.

"Mr. Duffy's claim that he had secured a bank loan came as a complete surprise. All of the revelations relating to the expenses during the campaign are new," a government official said on condition of anonymity.

Greenhouse gas. PM says technology is key to reducing emissions

Technological change will prove to be the key to cutting greenhouse-gas emissions, Prime Minister Stephen Harper told a blue-chip audience on Thursday.

Simply imposing emissions targets or trying to cap economic growth to reduce emissions isn't going to work, Harper said during a question-and-answer session at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City.

"I am convinced that, over time, we are not going to effectively tackle emissions unless we develop the lower-emissions technology in energy and other sectors," he said.

"That is the thing that will allow us to square economic growth with emissions reduction and environmental protection. I'm convinced if we cannot square those, we are not going to make progress globally."

Any realistic international agreement to limit emissions has to cover everyone, not just the developed world, he added.

"We need a mandatory, international protocol that includes all significant emitters, and if we do not get that we will not be able to control global emissions."

Over the course of the hour-long session, a relaxed-looking Harper discussed climate change, the Keystone XL pipeline and Alberta's oilsands, as well as medicare, border issues, the Middle East and the perils that bedevil the global economy.

He waved off the concerns of environmental critics as he pitched the TransCanada pipeline project as a good thing for the United States that would, if approved, create thousands of jobs and reduce American reliance on offshore oil.

Blast from the past: Beaver Canoe paddles back to life

Canadiana comeback. Target to carry collection from homegrown '80s brand that will include apparel, home decor

Target is bringing an added dose of Canadiana to its stores north of the border through a new partnership with Beaver Canoe.

The U.S.-based retailer has announced an exclusive collaboration with the Beaver Canoe brand, which is part of Roots Canada.

In what is billed as a first for the brand, the Beaver Canoe for Target collection will feature home decor products. The home collection will include more than 65 pieces, like furniture, pillows, lighting, frames, vases and candles.

The Beaver Canoe collaboration with Target will also encompass a clothing collection for the retailer, which will include hoodies, sweatshirts, T-shirts, track pants and long-sleeve tops for everyone from toddlers to adults, in addition to outerwear and accessory offerings for men and women.

Prices for items in both the home and apparel collections will range from about $8 to $100. The Beaver Canoe apparel line is slated to arrive in Canadian Target stores on Sept. 8, with the home collection set to hit stores on Sept. 15. The partnership marks the second exclusive collaboration between Roots and Target. The retailer carries the Roots Outfitters collection, including fashions for women, men, boys, girls and toddlers.

Air travel. Ditch the baggage and board early on American

If you're travelling light, you can board earlier on American Airlines. The airline said Thursday that people carrying just a personal item that fits under the seat — no rolling suitcases — will be allowed to board before most other passengers.

American said that the change will speed up the boarding process and allow flights to take off sooner, helping the airline improve its on-time performance.

Airlines have been seeing a buildup in boarding times since they began charging fees for checked baggage as more people fight for limited space in overhead bins.

Wireless deal

Telus plan to buy Mobilicity could up prices, warns advocacy group

Telus announced a plan Thursday to buy struggling wireless carrier Mobilicity for $380 million, a deal observers say will prompt higher prices for monthly cellphone service if it is allowed.

"Maybe you want to talk to your provider and renegotiate your deal now," said John Lawford, executive director of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre.

The company, which does not require long-term contracts, brought unlimited talk-and-text plans to the marketplace, said Lawford. "In a lot of places where Mobilicity offers service you're going back to just three operators. You can guess who they are — Bell, Telus and Rogers. Prices will just go up."

Step away from the sirloin. Rising food prices lead to more comparison shopping

A recent survey of Canadian adult consumers found a large majority of them believe the price of the food they buy has gone up in the past year and more than half said they are doing more comparison shopping than before.

The Ipsos Reid study done for the Royal Bank suggests the average monthly food bill, not including eating out, for the 3,024 people it surveyed last month was $411 per household.

Eighty-four per cent of respondents said their food prices have increased over the past year. The survey, conducted April 2 to 15, also found 57 per cent of respondents said they comparison shop more than before and 41 per cent said they were more budget conscious or less likely to make impulsive purchases.

"In light of concerns over escalating food prices, more Canadians are looking for cost-saving strategies they can use on their next trip to the grocery store," said Jason Round, head of the bank's financial planning unit. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Riding the rails across Canada to promote transit infrastructure

The birth of Canada's national railway has been widely viewed and written about as the physical link that connected and, ultimately, created our country.

More than 128 years later, London, Ont.'s Kadie Ward is out to show the government there's more work to be done.

Ward, along with a multimedia crew, will board a VIA Rail train Tuesday in Halifax and ride the rails all the way to Vancouver, where she'll attend the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' annual conference. Along the way, she'll blog about how cities on the route are successfully using transit and digital infrastructure to connect people.

Ward, who's spent years working in economic development, also plans to highlight shortcomings. The end goal, she said, is convincing municipal, provincial and federal leaders that Ottawa's recent $14-billion commitment to infrastructure upgrades needs to be pumped into more than roads and sewers.

1 Diplomacy. Osaka Mayor Toru Hashimoto defended forced prostitution of "comfort women" in the Second World War, saying that they were necessary in providing much needed "rest" to soldiers. Hashimoto, previously the youngest governor in Japanese history, stated last year that Japan needed "a dictatorship." He has what I call "political Tourette's."

2 Migratory patterns. The U.S. Senate is considering a bill allowing Canadian "snowbirds" to stay down south for longer. Currently, Canadian citizens can spend up to six months in America without losing their health coverage. The new bill would grant an extension of 60 additional days. If it passes, the "early bird" team at the Cheesecake Factory will also throw in a plastic couch cover with a cable subscription for 24-hour reruns of Golden Girls and Matlock.

3 Revolving doors. Jay Leno will be replaced by Jimmy Fallon, whose spot will be filled by Seth Meyers. Jon Stewart takes a break, leaving John Oliver to host The Daily Show, and Barbara Walters announces impending retirement while Craig Ferguson hopes Letterman will do the same. Jimmy Kimmel has lost weight, so no one recognizes him, and when I ask my grandmother what she watches, she says, "Johnny Carson."

4 Oops. P.E.I. Sen. Mike Duffy misclaimed expenses for his Ottawa home, but once audited, was able to pay back $90,000 with a cheque from the PM's chief of staff. He also repaid $1,050 for expenses declared while in Florida for non-Senate business. In unrelated news, a man arrested for grand theft auto told authorities, "Was that not my mother's car? My bad. Take it back."

5 Space Oddity. They're calling astronaut Chris Hadfield a rock star: first Canadian to command the International Space Station, almost a million Twitter followers and YouTube hits, and a Bowie-cover music video. After being up for so long, he finally came back to Earth, acclimating himself at a rehabilitation centre. He's not just a rock star, he's Steven Tyler.

Jolt is poised for stimulant success with slogans like, "Don't drive drowsy," "Kick ass in class" and, my personal fave, "A party in your pocket!" Umm ... yes, please.

7 Anti-social media. Disney actress Ashley Tisdale has been shaken by an obsessed fan who sent her more than 18,000 tweets before showing up at her home. Barbie house opens with controversy

The attraction is not without criticism. A topless woman from female rights group Femen targeted the opening of the Dreamhouse Thursday, holding a burning doll on a crucifix and dozens of other protesters, shouting and holding signs, flooded the premises. METRO

Re-evaluating the dream

"For us, this so-called Dreamhouse symbolizes the beauty craze and the discrimination of women in modern day life. It presents a cliché of the female role in society."

Michael Koschitzki,

The protest was supported by other left-wing demonstrators shouting "pink stinks" who were swiftly ejected from the Dreamhouse site by security staff.

RE: Mayor Defends Use Of Wartime Prostitution, published May 15

May I suggest a proper headline for your article on a Japanese mayor justifying sexual slavery during the Second World War?

"Mayor defends use of wartime rape."

In your article you quote the mayor as saying kidnapping, forcible confinement, rape, torture, and beatings were not sex trade, but in Japan were necessary to "maintain discipline."

Let us be clear: torture and sexual abuse are never necessary, and can never be justified as a means of maintaining discipline. What happened was rape.

The use of so called "comfort women" was neither discipline nor sex trade. It was abuse and torture. Tens of thousands of young women were kidnapped as sex slaves by the Japanese army during the Second World War. Many women were teenagers. Many died. Japan has never formally apologized or compensated for this war crime. It was a war crime. It was torture. It was rape.

The women who were abused deserve nothing less than a full apology. So does the world.

Star Trek Into Darkness promises to take movie audiences to another galaxy. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Stars of outer space

Film's final frontier. With Star Trek the must-see movie this weekend, the Reel Guys look back at their favourite flicks from another world

Richard: Mark, Into Darkness is the best pure popcorn flick of the year so far. It is state of the art in every way, particularly when it comes to the effects. As great as it looks, I'm a sucker for '50s B-movie effects like the 40-foot tall martian in the low budget 1959 space opera The Angry Red Planet. The campy creature was actually a 15-inch tall puppet made from elements of a rat, bat, spider, and crab and was later featured on the cover of the Misfits' album, Walk Among Us. What are some of your favourites?

Mark: Interesting you mentioned Angry Red Planet. I saw it when I was 10 at a downtown matinee and still shudder at the scene where the astronaut was turned into lime Jell-O. But when I was 16, Barbarella became my favourite movie set in outer space — that is, Jane Fonda's cleavage. But if it's cheese you're looking for, I want to nominate Mars Needs Women, a made for TV movie from 1967. Basically a beach party flick set in outer space featuring amazons, strippers and secretaries, it's best appreciated late at night with the kind of wine that comes in a box.

RC: Box wine has enhanced many a bad movie for me. No wine needed for Moon, a unique and fascinating sci fi film directed by David Bowie's son, Duncan Jones. Set on a space station, it's the story of a worker, played by Sam Rockwell, who discovers he may not be alone on his mission. To say anymore would ruin a really well constructed movie that cares more about ideas than special effects.

MB: Moon is a classy puzzle movie that owes a lot to Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey, the classiest space movie ever, maybe even too classy for its own good. Is it heretical to say that it bored me a bit? Alien sure didn't bore me. And its sequels, even the weak ones, kept me excited. But let's remember that not all space movies are necessarily monster movies. I'm thinking of The Right Stuff and Apollo 13, two films that rightly celebrate the courage and tenacity of the early astronauts. Both very exciting movies, I think.

RC: I agree, and let's not forget In the Shadow of the Moon, a beautifully shot documentary that features real life astronauts like Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong.

MB: On a lighter note, let's not forget Galaxy Quest, the funniest movie to take place in outer space.

The Hangover Part III opens next Friday. HANDOUT

This Hangover is all Alan

Zach Galifianakis. The weirdest part of the trio becomes the focal point of this final instalment

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

What's one more trip to Las Vegas between friends? The Hangover Part III finds Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and loose cannon Alan (Zach Galifianakis) teaming up for one last road trip gone wrong. Only this time, Galifianakis' Alan goes from comic relief to main character, which is a particularly risky proposition — at least according to Galifianakis.

Alan really takes centre stage in this instalment.
Yeah, as disheartening as that is (laughs). No, I mean we'll see if the audience thinks that an Alan storyline is sustainable for a movie — I mean a lot of Alan. There's a lot of Alan in this. I was excited because we got to explore Alan a little bit rather than have him be just a one-dimensional character that's kind of weird and saying random things. In this third instalment I think there's a little bit more of an emotional arc with him, which I appreciate. It's more of a story than just jokes with Alan this time. I don't know at the end of this where Alan goes. I think it's kind of open-ended, but at least he seems like he's on the right path.

I was going to ask where you see him five years from now.
Running the Tea Party. No, that's just a good-natured joke. I don't know where Alan would be. Hopefully he's married, and he probably drives by Phil's house a lot and honks to see if Phil will come out, and then Phil maybe looks through his blinds to see who it is, if it's Alan outside. Every other Thursday Phil will come out and say hi to him.

They've been billing this as the final instalment. Why is the trilogy the standard for film series?
Well, part of it is overstaying your welcome, I think. After the first one I was fine with just leaving well enough alone, to be honest. But then it was so fun to do the movies, and I thought there was more to explore, ultimately. But after the third one ... it's part of, as I said, not overstaying your welcome, and just the timing of it seems right to not do anything else with this. I've never really thought about the trilogy thing. The good thing about the third one is it allows kind of a nice goodbye. With the second one there's no closure, really. There was an event, they'll go on with their lives. This one seems like there's a little bit of closure.

The Hangover films have been phenomenally successful. If this one follows suit, do you think you'll have to try to talk them out of making a fourth one?
Well, I think it's bad to do movies because of economic gain. As an entertainer or an actor, you want to try to do other things and challenge yourself to try other roles, and it's time to move on. I think everybody feels that, the director and the other actors — and not out of anything but love. There won't be a fourth.

Speaking of doing new things, you're currently filming Birdman, a comedy from Alejandro Gonzalez Iñarritu, who's better known for heavier films.
It's a comedy, and Alejandro hasn't made one. He's a great filmmaker, obviously. The little I can tell you about (it)is you kind of know you're in the hands of a really experienced technician and great filmmaker. It's been a really great work experience for me. I'm there with really serious actors who've done really accomplished work. I think I'm the only one in the cast who's never won a trophy ...

Jordana Brewster lives life in the fast lane

Fast & Furious 6. In a high action movie full of muscles and mayhem, actress taps into her maternal side

RICHARD PECKETT
Metro World News

There are very few movies where you can use phrases like "oiled bodies" and "torqued to the max" and accurately describe both men and machines — but Fast & Furious 6 is one of them. It's the series' latest gear-head film where muscle Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel) and the rest of his car-thievin' gang smash bang and wallop their way through yet another international criminal threat. The sixth instalment brings its hefty carbon footprint to London to stop the evil Brit, Owen Shaw (Luke Evans), with all the death-defying stunts, explosions and sick-making driving we've come to expect from the franchise. Amongst all of the testosterone-fuelled fist pumping and steely looks, there's the relative calm of Jordana Brewster, who plays Mia Toretto, Vin Diesel's on-screen sister and linchpin of the "criminal family." We chat to Jordana about real-life speeding, babies and why guys who drive souped-up cars are "douche bags."

It's an intense, high-octane movie that frankly gave me heart palpitations. What gets your heart racing?
Ah, you know, I'm really claustrophobic, so that'll get my heart racing.

Any bad experiences?
I think it's something that comes with age, and I'm only 33, but it happened in my late 20s: I got in a plane and it felt really enclosed and I started freaking out and I just couldn't breathe.

You play quite a maternal role in the latest Fast and Furious, has the film made you broody at all?
Has it made me broody? Meaning wanting a baby? Yeah. I definitely want kids really soon. I would like two or three, so I better get started and my husband, who is eleven years older than me, is game whenever I'm game.

Show offs

What's with guys and flashy cars?

Guys that drive souped-up, flashy cars look a bit ridiculous. Do you think that they're a bit of a penis extension?
I think they can be for some men … and you usually know when you see it. The car that's the loudest and the flashiest will have a douche bag behind the wheel. Yeah, it's like jewelry or the bag you're wearing, you shouldn't have to show off too much through something material.

Catch Jordana Brewster in Fast & Furious 6 in theatres next Friday. HANDOUT

The girls do as much fighting as the guys, are you a little envious that you didn't get a few more fight scenes?
A little bit. That was a sacrifice … I love what the baby brings into the mix. I love that it shows (Diesel's character) Dom's very sweet vulnerable side. The fact that he has a new nephew shows the new dynamic in Mia and Brian's relationship, but I didn't get to kick ass like Gal (Gadot), Michelle (Rodriguez), and Gina (Carano).

I've been in quite embarrassingly pathetic scuffles. Have you ever been in a proper fight?
A girl slapped me once. I went to an all girls' school in New York and a girl slapped me in the dark room — I was developing pictures — and she slapped me and I slapped her back. It was a bitch slapping.

Is that the worst girly battle you've been in?
Actually no, my sister and I would get in really bad fights when we were younger and I would threaten to bite her all the time. So I would bare my teeth and that was my threat… Yeah, we were just really aggressive.

Comedy/Drama

The Sapphires

Director. Wayne Blair

Stars. Chris O'Dowd, Deborah Mailman, Jessica Mauboy

At the height of the girl group craze of the late 1960s four Australian Aboriginal teens, tutored by piano player and manager Dave Lovelace (Chris O'Dowd), take a shot at fame. And try not to get shot at during their gigs singing for the troops in Vietnam. The Sapphires is at its best when it embraces its light and fluffy soul. Romances swirl, as do glittery costumes. It's a slight, but entertaining take, with great performances, on the effect of music to change people's lives. RICHARD CROUSE

Pinkett Smith talks the power of women

Angela Davis doc.
Actress says spending time with activist changed her and prompted growth

Jada Pinkett Smith may have started as an actress, but these days her list of jobs includes author, singer-songwriter, philanthropist, successful businesswoman — and, of course, wife and mother.

With husband Will Smith, she started Overbrook Entertainment, which has produced many of Smith's films, as well as the upcoming remake of Annie. But Pinkett Smith's more recent focus has been the documentary Free Angela Davis and Other Political Prisoners, which marks the 40th anniversary of the acquittal of the 1970s political activist who was once on the FBI's Most Wanted list.

Davis was removed from her teaching job at UCLA in 1969 because she was a member of the Communist Party. A year later, she was charged with murder and kidnapping in a shootout in front of the Marin County, Calif., courthouse, then acquitted by an all-white jury.

Pinkett Smith says she learned a lot from spending time with Davis, who was by her side for this interview.

What did you know about Angela Davis growing up?
I knew that she was a pivotal part of the movement and I knew that she was powerful and I knew that she was intelligent, but what I didn't receive was the beauty of her feminine side, you know, and her softness, and the strength in her vulnerable nature ... I've learned a lot just simply being in her presence in that way.

You seem quite comfortable sharing your views on social media — you recently asked whether white women should be allowed on the cover of black women's magazines.
One of the reasons that I did that is right now one of my very strong focuses at this point is trying to figure out how to engage women to flow power to one another. The idea is that there's a white woman's issue. Or there's a black woman's issue. There's a Latina woman's issue. The idea for women to understand is that if we could come together and flow each other power for issues that affect us all, that we would get a lot done.

These are subjects that we can't be afraid to talk about because they hurt. That's the step toward getting to solutions, and the step toward community.

Marshall Mathers a.k.a Eminem

Slim Shady hasn't been stabbed, but enjoy your spam!

Eminem wants to make it clear that reports of him being stabbed have been greatly exaggerated. His rep is dismissing a Facebook post purporting to show the singer "left nearly dead after being stabbed four times in NYC," according to E! News. "Not true," the rep says. "He remains un-stabbed." And it turns out this wasn't just another false Internet rumour about a celebrity dying or getting injured. The post also subjected those foolish enough to click on it to an avalanche of spam.

Supportive Voight was unaware of his daughter Jolie's mastectomy

Talk about not being in the loop. John Voight says he found out about daughter Angelina Jolie's voluntary double mastectomy the same way everyone else did — reading her New York Times essay about it — despite having seen her just days before the news broke, according to the NY Daily News. "I saw her two days ago with my son Jamie (Haven). We all got together for his birthday, with her and Brad (Pitt). But I didn't know. It wasn't obvious at all," Voight says. "I found out (Tuesday) morning. I was as surprised as anyone and deeply moved by the way she's handled this. She's a very extraordinary person, the way she examined it and what she shared."

Sevigny says 'comfortable shoes' will chase off Paltrow's Met Gala blues

Chloe Sevigny thinks Gwyneth Paltrow may be overreacting by claiming she's through with the Met Gala. (Paltrow has sworn off the swanky New York event after finding this year's "un-fun" and too hot.) "Maybe her sleeves were too tight. If you're in a dress where you can't breathe, then you're not comfortable," Sevigny tells New York magazine. "You have to wear comfortable shoes and an outfit you can be OK in." The most important thing, according to Sevigny, is to not take it all so seriously. "I think it depends on what table you're at, and who you're with, and obviously your attitude," she says. "But it's a lot of hoopla over not a lot. Everybody thinks it's so much pressure, and you do the carpet and it's such a big deal, and it's just a museum fundraiser, you know?"

I've met enough winemakers who think they're rock stars, so I guess it's only fair that a rock star can think himself a winemaker. Dave Matthews, the man behind the newly released The Dreaming Tree wines, is only the latest celeb to grape it up.

The roster of famous names making wine reads like an awards show guest list: Greg Norman, Mike Weir, Dan Aykroyd, Francis Ford Coppola, Sting, Wayne Gretzky, Madonna, and even Brangelina.

While I'd never suggest the others are dialing it in, Matthews has been hands on in choosing his Californian wine partners, and the resulting juice (if you'll forgive the obvious pun) sings in the glass.

The DT 2011 Chardonnay ($16.95 - $19.99) is a well-rounded, buttery chard with woodsy spice that just may have all you "anything but chardonnay" zealots burning your membership cards. Its red sister, The DT 2010 Crush ($16.95 - $19.99), is a mega, merlot-led blend of California North Coast fruit with a rolling flavour of plums, raspberry jam and brown sugar that will duet well with a red meat-themed, long weekend barbecue.

A fine burger balance

Cheeseburgers with Mango-Chile Salsa.

Fire up the barbecue this weekend and try a unique combination

This tasty cheeseburger recipe that includes the nutrient-rich, sweet mango mixed into a salsa with fiery chiles to add a south Asian flavour that will delight your taste buds.

1. Combine patty ingredients, keeping the mixture crumbly rather than compressed. With wet hands, gently form four loosely packed patties of equal size, each about 3/4 inch thick. Don't compact the meat too much or the patties will be tough. Using your thumb or the back of a spoon, make a shallow indentation about 1 inch wide in the centre of each patty. This will help the patties cook evenly and prevent them from puffing on the grill.

Ingredients

Patties
- 1 1/2 lbs ground chuck (80% lean)
- 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper

Salsa
- 1 large mango, cut into 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)
- 2 tbsp roughly chopped fresh cilantro leaves
- 1 tbsp fresh lime juice
- 1 medium serrano chile pepper, seeded and minced
- 1/4 tsp kosher salt

Burgers
- 4 thin slices pepper jack cheese
- 4 hamburger buns, split
- Dijon mustard

This recipe serves four. NEWS CANADA

2. In a non-reactive bowl combine the salsa ingredients. Toss gently and then refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 hour. (After an hour, the fruit starts to become mushy.)

3. Prepare the grill for direct cooking over medium-high heat (400 to 500 F).

4. Grill the patties over direct medium-high heat, with the lid closed, until cooked to medium doneness, 8 to 10 minutes, turning once when the patties release easily from the grate without sticking. During the last minute of grilling time, place a slice of cheese on each patty to melt, and toast the buns, cut side down, over direct heat.

5. Spread the bottom half of each bun with Dijon mustard, and serve the patties warm on the buns topped with mango salsa.

In a barbecue ideas pickle? No problem

Preparing al fresco feasts for family and friends means stocking up on grilling essentials that will satisfy everyone's taste preferences. From pre-planned meals to impromptu gatherings, the burger is king, so having the right condiments on hand is key.

Chef Matt Basile, creator of the Fidel Gastro Food Truck, has teamed up with Bick's Pickles to recommend the following ideas for keeping everyone fueled up and satisfied.

Afternoon Dockside Gathering

Create a delicious array of mini burger sliders made from a variety of meats, including chicken, beef and even bison. Serve on fresh bakery buns with a selection of cheeses, along with a variety of savouries, such as Bick's Mini-Crunch'ems pickles, sliced beets, and tangy yellow mustard.

Country Burger Buffet

Why not set up a marché style spread that will satisfy everyone's burger tastes? Offer a wide variety of toppings and spreads including: cheeses like cheddar, swiss, or blue; mayo, mustard, hummus, and relishes such as Bick's Hot Pepper Relish and sweet corn. And don't forget the all-important crunch factor with some classic dill pickles.

This Burger Has It All

Nothing says summer like a delicious, juicy hamburger straight off the barbecue — but having plenty of topping options for both adults and kids is essential to enhancing flavour. Why not make it spicy and extra crunchy with hot pepper relish and smoked cheddar cheese topped with bacon, hot pepper rings and some extra garlic pickles? Or, says Bick's, go with an Aussie inspired burger that's topped with sliced beets, grilled pineapple slices, a fried egg and most importantly, Sandwich Savers Extra Garlic Pickles.

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp (15ml) mayonnaise
- 1 tsp (5ml) chipotle sauce
- 1 hamburger bun
- 1 beef patty
- 3 slices peeled and cored pineapple rings
- 2 slices of crunchy Sandwich Savers Extra Garlic Pickles
- 4 slices of Bick's Sliced Beets, drained
- 1 tsp (5ml) butter
- 1 egg

1. Combine mayonnaise and chipotle sauce and spread on hamburger bun. Set aside.

2. Grill beef patty on high until no longer pink in centre. Place pineapple rings on grill. Grill 1 minute per side, then remove. Place 1/2 of pickles, 1/2 of beets and 2 slices of pineapple on bottom bun. Top with burger and remaining pickles and pineapple. Melt butter in small skillet. Fry egg until crispy and brown. Place on top of burger toppings and replace bun. NEWS CANADA/BICKS.CA

Stars ready to shine as Saskatoon welcomes CHL

Memorial Cup. After massive pre-tournament layoff, Blades host Knights on Friday night

The 2013 MasterCard Memorial Cup won't be short on intriguing storylines.

First there are the hosts who want to make amends for an up-and-down season. Add to the mix a record-setting powerhouse from Nova Scotia, a club from Ontario that scored in the final second of Game 7 to advance, and a team from Oregon that used a coach's suspension as a rallying cry.

Oh, and then there's three of the top prospects for this year's NHL draft, not to mention at least five others who could go in the first round.

The annual 10-day tournament to decide the Canadian Hockey League championship begins Friday with the host Saskatoon Blades taking on the Ontario Hockey League's London Knights in a game that features teams that took very different routes to get here.

The second matchup of the round-robin format goes Saturday with the Halifax Mooseheads of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League meeting the Portland Winterhawks of Western Hockey League.

The Blades' 2012-13 campaign included a rough start, an 18-game winning streak and a shocking first-round sweep — all of which were documented by a reality television crew that tracked their every move.

The Knights, meanwhile, cruised through the regular season and the first three rounds of the playoffs before finding themselves down 3-1 in the OHL final against the Barrie Colts. London fought back to win three straight, clinching the league title in dramatic fashion when Bo Horvat scored with less than a second to go in the deciding game to give the Knights a 3-2 win.

The Blades meanwhile have been waiting for this moment for some time.

"Since we were awarded (the tournament) a year and a half ago the focus was on the start of the Memorial Cup," Blades coach Lorne Molleken said. "We're all excited to get things underway. Our players, I can tell you, they're tired of practising."

Knights coach Dale Hunter is also confident his team will be ready, despite the travel and quick turnaround.

London, which won the Memorial Cup as the host back in 2005, lost in last year's final in overtime to Shawinigan.

"Every game is like a Game 7 here. It pretty much controls your destiny for the rest of the tournament," Knights forward Max Domi said. "Last year we were a pretty young team.

"We look at ourselves as a pretty experienced group and we're expecting big things."

The Blades will not have played a game in 51 days when they step onto the ice at Credit Union Centre, while the Knights come in having clinched their league title just four days earlier.

On short rest

"That's what hockey's all about. You get three or four days' rest.... If you're a hockey player all you want to do is play games so I think they'll be anxious to play."

London Knights head coach Dale Hunter, whose team won the OHL championship on Monday.

Mooseheads-Winterhawks

Saturday presents scintillating talent clash

Saturday provides a mouth-watering game for scouts and fans alike.

The matchup between Halifax and Portland features Winterhawks defenceman Seth Jones, ranked as the No. 1 North American skater by NHL Central Scouting, and Mooseheads forwards Nathan MacKinnon and Jonathan Drouin, who sit at No. 2 and No. 3.

The No. 1 Mooseheads had only six losses in the regular season, a record for the QMJHL and just one shy of the all-time CHL mark.

NHL playoffs. Marchand notches first goal of playoffs in overtime to give Boston Game 1 victory

Brad Marchand scored with 4:20 left in the first overtime and the Boston Bruins beat the New York Rangers 3-2 in the first playoff game in 40 years between the Original Six teams.

Marchand, Boston's top goal scorer in the regular season, got his first of the post-season on a pass from Patrice Bergeron. Marchand had carried the puck up the right side, passed it to Bergeron and kept going toward the net. Bergeron passed across the slot and Marchand tipped it past goalie Henrik Lundqvist from the left side of the crease.

The Bruins carried the play throughout overtime. They applied constant pressure, but couldn't score during a power play when Derek Dorsett was penalized for interference at 2:20 of overtime.

Boston nearly won in regulation, but Johnny Boychuk's shot from the point clanged off the post with one-tenth of a second left. Then he hit the left post again at 6:34 of overtime. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

World championship

Canada doomed in shootout again

The quarter-final of the IIHF World Championship has become a hurdle Canada just can't get over.

Canada was eliminated from medal contention in the round of eight for a fourth straight year. It was a 3-2 shootout quarter-final loss to host Sweden that knocked Canada out this time.

Canada last advanced to the semifinals in 2009 en route to a silver medal. Current head coach Lindy Ruff was behind Canada's bench that year too. Canada last won a world title in 2007.

For all the skill, experience and firepower this Canadian team had at forward, shootouts were not its forte in Stockholm.

Thursday's loss in extra shots was Canada's second of the tournament following a 3-2 shootout loss to Switzerland in the preliminary round.

"When you look at the numbers of some of our shooters, how good the numbers are, that's the one thing we let slip away," Ruff said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sharks forward Raffi Torres GETTY IMAGES

Sharks forward Raffi Torres was suspended for the rest of San Jose's second-round playoff series against Los Angeles on Thursday for an illegal check to the head of Kings forward Jarret Stoll during the opener.

The NHL announced the suspension a few hours before the Kings hosted the Sharks in Game 2. Stoll wasn't expected to play for the Kings. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
This has been a busy week for you, so maybe you need to slow down a bit. Right. And maybe the Sun will rise in the west and the tide won't come in. Aries never slows down — it's not in your nature.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Mars in your sign gives you all the energy and ambition you need to make a name for yourself, so go for it. Too often in the past you have waited for other people to take the lead.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The thing you need to realize is that you don't have to enjoy something to be good at it. If fate points you in a certain direction today then that is the direction you should move.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Listen to what others say you should do today — then do the opposite. You know your mind better than they do so follow what your instincts tell you.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Today, you will be confronted by someone who has more power than you but that must not be allowed to faze you. They may have might on their side but you have right and that's why you will win in the end.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may have strong opinions about an issue but don't waste your time shouting about it. Find ways you can make a practical difference, then get on with them quietly. It's not about words, it's about actions.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Having told so many people what you intend to accomplish don't you think it's about time you started actually doing it? Anyone can talk about making a difference but only a few people ever get round to it.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Mars in your opposite sign of Taurus will help you get rid of an emotional attachment you no longer need. Scorpio has a reputation for ruthlessness and today everyone will see it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be tempted to work twice as hard at something to make sure you get it done on time but is it necessary to put in so much effort and maybe exhaust yourself? No. Ease up.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Be careful what you start over the next 24 hours because you will have no choice but to finish it before you can move on to something else. Think before you act and don't let your passions rule you.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Chances are you will find yourself involved in some kind of dispute with your nearest and dearest. Whatever else happens, you must resist the urge to open up old wounds.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Someone else's good idea can be adapted by you to suit your own needs. Is that immoral? Of course not. There is no copyright on ideas, so you are free to take it and develop it any way you see fit. SALLY BROMPTON
